DOMO ARIGATO, MR. ROBOTO

WRONG BONUS FOR YOU, RED JOEY VOTTO

JUST LIVE AND LET DIE, BIG YAPHET KOTTO

TIME TO MAKE WAY FOR:

TRIVIA JOTTO!

Jotto is a fun word game similar to the game show Lingo (hosted by the inimitable Chuck Woolery!) In regular Jotto, one player selects a secret word (usually from 4-7 letters), and then the other player picks their own word. The secret word is limited to common English language words, and no proper nouns are permitted. The player who selected the secret word will then tell the second player how many of the letters in their word matches up with letters in the secret word. For example, say the secret word is BINDER and the other player selects HUNGRY. The secret word player would say they have 2 letters right (the N and the R).

There are some rules for words with duplicate letters. For example, say the target word was NAPKIN, and the guess word was BANANA. The number of matches would be 3 (both N's and one A), with the other three would be misses (other two A's and B). If it were the reverse, it would still only be the same three matches (the A in NAPKIN would only match to one of the A's in BANANA, not all three).

Since this is a trivia contest, we're going to jazz the game up a little bit. Instead of having someone select the "guess words", those words will be determined by answering trivia questions. In addition, to narrow down the field a little bit, the target words will fit into six categories (basically, one for each of the categories from Trivial Pursuit). Then, the six target words will become "guess words" to find the final word, which is derived from the most important trivia category of all … Williamsiana! The number next to each "guess word" is the number of letters it shares with the target word, and the number next to the target words at the end of the bonus is the number of letters they share with the final word.

Good luck! Each of the answers to the trivia questions, as well as each of the target/final words are six letters in length. Some of them are normal English words, but many are proper nouns. All of them are single words. Unless otherwise specified, questions asking for a person's name are looking for a surname.

Please note: we are grading these both on your answers to the trivia questions (1-36), and your solving of the target words (37-43), so even if you can't solve the puzzle, you will get points for answering the questions.
